22. Business culture

Business culture is one of the main vectors of staff behaviour within an institution. It refers to the common values (e.g., ethics and integrity) and standards that characterize a business and influence the mindset, behaviour and actions of its entire staff. It informs decision making for both the institution's strategic decisions and decisions made by the conduct of client-facing staff.

An FTC-centric business culture creates an environment that fosters client confidence and long-term client relationships. Conversely, a deficient business culture can cause serious harm to clients and damage the reputation of the business institution to the point of compromising its solvency.

AnA financial institution with an FTC-centric business culture:

Places clients' interests at the centre of its decisions and the conduct of its business

Recognizes and manages risks that could compromise FTC

 Ensures that results demonstrate, FTC outcomes are demonstrated, including through indicators, that staff are acting ethicallyand with integrity in their dealings with clients developed for this purpose

Communicates FTC outcomes across to the persons concerned at all levels of the organization

3 Stakeholder accountability

In providing products, the financial institution, upon first contact with the client, makes a commitment to them and holds it throughout the life cycle of the product, whether or not its distribution channel is independent. With this in mind, the institution adopts commercial practices ensuring FTC at all stages of the relationship with the client. The institution consequently monitors the product offering process to ensure compliance.

The fact that ultimate responsibility lies with the institution does not relieve intermediaries⁶ of their own obligations to clients.

3. Responsibility of the financial institution

Sound Commercial Practices Guideline Autorité des marchés financiers

The AMF expects financial institutions to fulfill their FTC obligation at all stages of the product life cycle.

A financial institution's FTC obligation continues to apply even though some intermediaries⁶ involved in offering the financial institution's products may have their own obligations.

Financial institutions therefore obtain reasonable assurance that the actions of intermediaries and any other persons acting on its behalf who are involved in offering their products enable them to discharge their FTC obligation.

Moreover, financial institutions remain fully responsible for any activities that may be outsourced by them. 7

Intermediaries are the individuals and firms authorized to offer financial products and services pursuant to the Act respecting the distribution of financial products and services, CQLR, c. D-9.2.

5 Financial institutions' relationships with service providers

When functions related to commercial practices are outsourced,⁷ the service provider performs such functions in compliance with the laws, regulations and guidelines applicableto the institution's activities.

In managing their relationships with service providers, institutions are expected to:

- Deal only with service providers that have high ethical and professional standards
- Develop outsourcing agreements that do not compromise the quality of services or adversely affect their ability to fulfill FTC-related obligations
- Reassess their existing arrangements with service providers, upon renewal or as required, to ensure that they continue to contribute to the achievement of FTC outcomes

6.25.2 Handling conflicts of interest

The AMF expects any real or potential conflicts of interest to be avoided or managed in a manner that ensures FTC.

Major sources of conflicts

The AMF expects any real or potential conflicts of interest to be avoided or managed in a manner that ensures FTC.

A conflict of interest include monetary and non-monetary incentives that situation may arise from:

Established among other things, the compensation and performance management programs

 Financial institutions' put in place or the relationships with intermediaries or established between the financial institution and theintermediary and any other person acting on theirits behalf who is involved in offering theirits products.

A conflict of interest situation could result in an inappropriate sale, transaction or practice or have an impact on the quality of services provided. It could also affect the or advice given to clients, as applicable.

The institution should therefore ensure that every situation is assessed to prevent aregularly identify and assess the risks of practices with a potentially adverse impact on FTC that may result from conflict of interest or ensure that it is managed in a way that ensures FTCs ituations.

Expectations to achieve this outcome

Put clients' interests first

Take all reasonable steps to identify and avoid or manage real or potential conflicts of interest

Put clients' interests first

- Avoid any real or potential conflict of interest that cannot be managed in a way that ensures FTC-Thefinancial institution is able to demonstrate
- Demonstrate that it has put controls have been put in place to ensure that the conflict of interest can be managed in away that ensures FTC
- Disclose in writing to the client concerned any real or potential conflict of interest that might reasonably have an impact, given the circumstances, on the offer of products or the client's decisions. This disclosure is made in a timely manner, i.e., made before or at the time the product is offered, and it is not sufficient in and of itself for the conflict of interest to be considered to have been properly managed
- When relying on, among other things, On-disclosure of a conflict of interest, ensure that such disclosure does not place an unreasonable burden on the client:
- H allows the client to assess the nature and scope of the conflict of interest, its potential impact on the services provided, the potential risk it could pose for him or her and the way it is managed

6.35.3 Product design

The AMF expects the needs and interests of the various target client groups to be taken into account when designing new insurance products or significantly altering existing products.

Not

The AMF expects financial institutions to take the common needs and interests of the various target client groups into account when designing products.

Designing products includes developing new products and significantly altering existing ones. For the financial institution, not taking the common needs and interests of the various target client groups into account when designing new-products or making significant adaptations to existing products increases could increase the likelihoodrisk of unsuitable inappropriate offers or negative impacts for clients, particularly with complexand risky products.

Expectations to achieve this outcome

Product developmentdesign relies on the use of adequate information enabling the identification of client needs and interests

When developing a new product

Product design, including selecting a product selection of products originating from a third party, the parties, involves an appropriate assessment of the main features of the product¹¹ and product¹¹ and the disclosure documents provided to clients are thoroughly assessed by individuals from the by institution staff, who have the skillscompetencies to perform such an assessment¹² assessment.¹²

_____The process for approving a new product enables the institution to:

- Define the target client group that the product is likely to be appropriate for e-__Offer a product that delivers the benefits and features reasonably expected by the target client group

- Identify, monitor or roduce and manage any risks that the product might present for the target clientsclient group
- _____Take into account applicable statutory and regulatory amendments, technological developments, orchanges in market conditions
- Defining the target client group involves identifying the common needs, and interests, characteristice¹³ and objectives of the members of the group.

The level of detail of the criteria used by the institution to identify a target client group is based on the type of product (e.g., nature, features, complexity, level of risk-profile) and enables the institution to determine which clients belong to the group; and those for whom the product may not be appropriate

 For commonly used, low-risk products, the target client group may be less precisely defined because the product more often than not suits the needs and interests of a wide range of clients

6.115.11 Protection of personal information

The AMF expects the privacy policy and procedures to ensure compliance with the Act respecting the protection of personal information in the private sector³⁰ and reflect best practices in this area.

Theft, loss or inappropriate use of personal information obtained from clients represents a risk to clients and a threat to the reputation of the institution.

The protection of personal information is a key issue for an institution.

The AMF expects financial institutions to establish and put in place measures enabling them to comply with their obligations with respect to the protection of personal information ("privacy obligations").

A financial institution is responsible for protecting the personal information it holds.

The sustainability of its operations depends, among other things, on its clients' trust in this respect. They, and clients expect their personal information about them held by the financial institution or another person acting on the institution's behalf to remain confidential private and to be handled protected accordingly.

Expectations to achieve this outcome

 The board of directors and senior management are informed of Accordingly, the challenges pertaining institution's policies, processes and procedures relating to the protection of clients' personal information

 The policies and procedures concerning draw on best practices and enable it to discharge its privacy obligations, including those under the Act respecting the protection and use of personal and financial information establish safeguards against the misuse of information, improper access to information or the unauthorized disclosure of personal information contained in files information in the private sector.²⁷

 The The AMF also expects the financial institution ensures that service providers with access to personal information on the institution's clients have appropriate policies and procedures in place to ensure compliance with the Act respecting the protection of personal information in the private sector

 The institution assesses to assess the potential effects of new or emerging risks that could threaten the confidentialityprivacy of the personal information it holds and takes to take appropriate action to mitigate themsuchrisks.

 The institution identifies the actions that may need to be taken to respond to failuresto comply with its obligations relating to the protection of personal information, including reporting any information security incident to the regulators and any persons affected, including clients
