Hi Keith,

Appreciate you reaching out and we're happy to provide some clarification.

Our intention is that all courses, regardless of the provider, will need to be approved for accreditation. This is to ensure that all education materials provided to restricted licence representatives meet the competency standards set out in the Performance Requirements.

We are still in the process of developing aspects of the accreditation program for the Restricted Insurance Agency Licence and will share further details with stakeholders in due course.

Let me know if you have any other questions or comments or if you would like to discuss further, happy to schedule a time to chat. I will be away on holiday after tomorrow until the new year, so if you'd like to chat we can look for a time early in the new year.

If I don't hear from you before tomorrow, I hope you have a restful and relaxing holiday.

Thank you,

Hi Galen,

Thank you and Brett for your helpful clarifications both in the email below and in the letter from Brett.

Where I am still a bit uncertain is the comment below; let me know if a short discussion is best to review this. Let me take the example of one of my bank members. They will have fully fleshed out courses for new employees, which they may administer themselves. Does such a course need to be approved for accreditation purposes, or is that only for courses administered by third parties?

to the new regime and any new requirements that may apply. We expect once the Performance Requirements are set, it will be up to individual course providers to determine their own course structure, including knowledge measurement. The Insurance Council's involvement is expected to be only with respect to approving courses for accreditation purposes.

Thanks,

--Keith
